

Global population policy data base 1989.

United Nations - Global population policy data base 1989.

Description: -

-Global population policy data base 1989.

-

ST/ESA/SER.R/99

Population policy paper -- 28Global population policy data base 1989.

Notes: At head of title page: Department of International Economic and Social Affairs.

This edition was published in 1990

THE TANSON WILLIAMSON LIBRARY

Filesize: 16.29 MB

Tags: #International #Data #Base #(IDB)

Global population policy data base 1989.

Postpartum abstinence is traditional in Sudan and in the first two months following the birth of a child 90 percent of women were abstaining; this decreases to 32 percent after two months, and to 5 percent after one year. Furthermore, since the problem of international migration literally cuts across borders, solutions have to be sought in the context of the Southern African region, and even beyond.

World Population by Year

Women living in urban areas have lower fertility TFR 4. The maternal mortality rate, an important indicator of the reproductive health and socio-economic status of women, was estimated at a high of 230 per 100 000 deliveries in 1993. The field coordinator from the central office, or staff from the regional census offices, hand-carried the batches of questionnaires to Khartoum for data entry and editing.

IMF Data

The data entry and editing were completed one month after the end of the fieldwork. South African children face a range of physiological problems associated with malnourishment and poor health. A large proportion of women who went for contraceptive advice went to a family planning clinic, while men were in general more likely to go to a private doctor.

Population policies in 10 countries around the world

White Paper for the transformation of the health system in South Africa. Mechanisms for co-ordination and collaboration were either weak or ineffective. The SDHS covered approximately 80 percent of the total population of the country.

World Population by Year

The role of the Government in the development process is to facilitate people's ability to make informed choices, and to create an environment in which they can manage their lives.

Global population assistance: the 1989 assessment.

Young people in rural areas tend to drop out earlier than those in urban schools.

Related Books

- More nineteenth century studies - a group of honest doubters. --
- Maeda Tegatahō kaimei kōza
- Henry More - essai sur des doctrines théosophiques chez les platoniciens de Cambridge.
- A word-frequency list of scientific English.
- [Russkij jazyk v stranakh mira - \[Sb. stateč\]](#)