John Hardy Thursby

The area is 6,818 acres, but in 1897 part of the township called Cornholme or Portsmouth, adjoining Todmorden, was added to that township and taken into Yorkshire, the area of the reduced township of Cliviger being 6,724 acres, including 10 of inland water. A special train ran from Preston containing his Royal highness, and it travelled via Blackburn and Padham, arriving in Burnley at 11. In the southern half of the township stands Fulledge, with Brunshaw and Towneley Park to the south-east.

Both were efficient in their respective duties, and attended to them as diligently as any of the ship's crew. Although they were immediately attracted to one another, the rules of good behaviour in the early Victorian days forbade conversation without a formal introduction. The deans of Whalley probably held it together with the principal church, and in 1296 it was described as a chapel only, its altarage being worth as much as 20 marks a year, and the tithes of its district—Burnley, Cliviger, Worsthorne, Extwistle, Briercliffe, Habergham and Iglenhill—amounting to 49½ marks, or £46 6 s.
