Tips and other bright ideas for secondary school libraries. Volume 4 (Book, 2010) [tools.github.ffxiv.cn]

Yes, I have guidelines and procedures about make up work or food in class, but I want my class and rules to teach life lessons. These are all memories that are still vivid in my mind because they were different, and they were highly engaging. This is an especially impactful project for seniors before they go off to college.

8 Tips for Creating Effective Word Walls in Secondary

Will students be able to read it no matter where they are? Sometimes, you just have to play with the document to see if what you have will work. If you teach a history class, students can volunteer at a history museum, or they can even create history presentations to give to younger students at local schools. I show them example products and give them a due date, and then it is UP TO THE CLASS to figure out how to get from A to Z—how to get from the assignment to the publication date.
