Four Policy Actions to Improve Local Governance of the Oil and Gas Sector

Summary of some of the impacts in this report, in three domains and at three levels New governance approaches for conflict resolution and policy adopted by communities, local and national government, and others with power Community-based peace initiatives and other mechanisms integrate women, young people and minorities into decision-making More women standing for and achieving office Improved popular participation in decision-making and accountability Governments adopt pro-peace policies What helps local peacebuilding succeed? Evaluation reports should therefore differentiate roles and impacts more clearly, and report explicitly on the independence of local partners. Staff from UN agencies also struggled to get the required permits to travel to government-held areas of the state and only a few UN international staff could work there, and sometimes no international staff from international NGOs were allowed to visit or live there. The committee knew the underlying issues had to be addressed as well, and so persuaded the government to create an additional water point to reduce the pressure on existing resources.
