Technology And The Early Childhood Classroom

If they were receptive to the idea I would definitely encourage their use of a blog or wiki. I call this one the Feline Choice Award and it goes to Hanan Zayad for her post. I do see the benefits of using technology in the classroom, but I would be nervous initially about introducing something new to a classroom of high-schoolers.

The Process of Research Writing

Certainly, the concepts presented are solid; they don't change with passing years. It starts with a broad overview of research into an exploration of the process behind seeking out reputable sources, weaves in a few shorter essay assignments that serve as building blocks for a longer paper, and culminates with the ideas for a final, capstone research project -- something that naturally grows out of all the previous chapters. There can be research projects, writing projects, and library projects just to name a few.

So why not make education convenient to our students?. Think, pair and share Set a problem or a question around a certain topic, and pair up your students.

Edutopia

Hyperlinks help to connect key points to other chapters. Interface rating: 3 The interface is straightforward, but I could not locate any hyperlinks that worked. Scaffolding collaborative technical writing with procedural facilitation and synchronous discussion.

Edutopia

Interface rating: 2 The long blocks of text in each chapter aren't very reader friendly. There are different ways to create an involvement like this.

Writing together, collaborative writing in the classroom

. What strategies are available to navigate electronic texts and the internet? Cooperative writing often involves students in a group completing individual parts of a writing task without peer feedback and then putting the pieces together to present as a final product.

Examples of Accommodations & Modifications

I remember as early as last year, in graduate school, I had to help a professor set up her television for a movie to show to the class.
