Accessibility Services

Service desk staff need training to understand how best to offer services to people who are deaf or who have a significant hearing loss. You can find out more about these services and how to access them by contacting the local elementary school in your area. Separate undergraduate libraries should have facilities that foster the collaborative nature of study, research, and learning, and that promote effective and interactive access and use of information resources.

Guidelines for University Library Services to Undergraduate Students

The interactive map at the link below can help you find child counts of children who are deaf-blind in every state. Helpful strategies and suggestions from parents and families with a child who is deaf-blind.

National Association of the Deaf

Sign language interpretation can be provided in person or remotely via video remote interpreting VRI or video relay system VRS.

IFLA

In physical planning for facilities, undergraduate libraries provide for small group and instructional use. Is there a visual component to the emergency warning system? Age restrictions for programs are sometimes relaxed for people who have developmental delays and for whom the programs might be appropriate for their mental age rather than their chronological age. Enter at the link below, and select from a rich list of articles in English and Spanish related to the IEP.

Office for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing

Officers must not draw conclusions about incidents unless they fully understand -- and are understood by -- all those involved, including people who are deaf or hard of hearing .
