He had gained considerable reputation both in his native place and in London, as an artist of no ordinary promise. The Norwich School was a unique phenomenon in the history of 19th-century British art. Other Notes: John Middleton travelled to Scotland in 1853 and visited the Isle of Arran with his friend, fellow painter and tutor, Henry Bright, where he painted a small number of watercolours and oils.

The society effectively ceased to exist from that date.

Elizabeth Harvey

John Middleton hardly knew his birth mother, who died when he was young: he referred to his step-mother Mary Middleton as his mother.
