TOURS SUSPENDED UNTIL 2022 What is it? If you know of a woman who deserves a blue plaque and meets the , nominate her now and help us address the gender imbalance in London's blue plaques. In 2009 a 54th tablet was added, in the style of the Royal Doulton tiles, to commemorate print technician Leigh Pitt, the first addition to the wall for 78 years.

12 Historical Towns in the United Kingdom

For studious research or to geek out on paper-based artefacts. The aim is to stimulate public interest in the town's heritage.

Best Attractions in London

Of particular interest are the handful of houses that were not only lived in, but designed by the person named on the blue plaque: those admirable and rare examples of an architect bravely living with his own work. For a raucous, interactive take on theatre. These can also be affixed to the building, but are frequently free-standing markers with the text on each side, or, in larger instances, beginning on one side and continuing to the other.

'London is lucky to have the blue plaque scheme'

In 2007 the Residents Association erected a blue plaque in memory of Prime Minister at 12 Southway as part of the suburb's centenary celebrations. Conquered in the 9th century and ruled by Viking kings after, the groundings for the county of Yorkshire were set. Visitors can explore the history of the site and that of the country as a whole.
