BBC Board

Things are seriously spiralling out of control on the banning, censoring, cancelling front, even in the world's great democracies, and when things spiral out of control they can lead to all manner of unexpected consequences and aid the darkest enemies of democracy, such as the present PRC ruler-for-life. Stefanie Bolzen and Steve Richards, both unsympathetic towards Brexit, then piled on the agony, along with the BBC's Clive Myrie though Clive mainly stuck to criticising the Johnson government for not warning the public how bad it would be. Should I invite her to join me and Sue here? Obviously, from the headline and the format of the piece, we're meant to take it as an impartial 'explainer'.

Is the BBC biased?

While Moore is expected to continue as a trusted head of content, it is in news output that Davie should look to shore up his credentials. They don't seem to reckon much to us, do they? He now tours the country doing exhibition performances in bars and restaurants, but sadly last week's show had to be cancelled.

Board of Governors of the BBC

The BBC are terrified of appearing 'Islamophobic' despite that being the very last thing they are. Why should one person pay ONE channel a licence fee. It is of deep concern when our journalists are restricted and their work curtailed.

Is the BBC biased?

This is then not the column to ask why the BBC has spent 98 years being led by men, but rather what sort of BBC will mark its centenary.

BBC NEWS

Iran has always denied that it wants a bomb but since President Trump made his move the Iranians have intensified their enrichment of uranium and are now closer to being able to create a weapon. She applied, for example, to host Question Time but lost out to Fiona Bruce - though it appears the BBC also lost out as, by most accounts, Ms Bruce hasn't been a roaring success.

The BBC is worryingly close to becoming an arm of the Government, says its own former chair

The departure of, Director of the BBC's technology department has been linked to the findings of the review.
