It should be noted that other studies have found that certain brief clinic interventions can increase contraceptive use. It has enough breadth to provide a general overview of 'prevention with positives' and enough detail to satisfy and educate those already working in this area. It included a 15-minute audiotaped risk assessment and education program, a discussion ice-breaker, two brochures on skills and ways to avoid unprotected sex, a brochure on community resources, and parent brochures.

Adolescent HIV prevention

Among both males and females, the risk category was often unidentified. Preventing HIV in countries with low prevalence or where the epidemic is concentrated in specific populations is especially challenging since the spread of the virus is fuelled by high-risk, often stigmatized behaviour. Notably, these relatively brief interventions incorporated some of the 10 characteristics of effective sex and HIV education programs.
