Nazir

Meir said: He was born circumcised. It seems that Galen was the first to identify the Platonic tripartite soul with the Aristotelian division of living beings into vegetable, animal, and human; see Majid Fakhry, Ethical Theories in Islam Leiden: Brill, 1994 , 95 and n. In actuality, Ibn Sahula refers to his own Aesopian tale in which the hart uses his prudential intelligence to outwit his foe, the scheming and ambitious fox.

Introduction to Masechet Nazir and 2a

Regardless of precise measurement, the overlap between medieval Jewish philosophy and fables evoked an array of reactions—ranging from the pleasure of piquant harmonies to the irritation of jangling cacophony. Issachar studied under Moses Isserles. Thus, some sections are famously heterogenous, like Megillah 1:4—11, Pesahim 4, and all of Eduyot.
