What should he do therefore? This excellent man-- alas, so early cut down by death--was a recent graduate of Brown University; for a short time had been preceptor of its grammar-school in Providence; and having enjoyed ample opportunities of intellectual and religious culture, was able to impart to the young licentiate in close proximity just the assistance in his earnest endeavors for self-improvement for which he was now panting. Minister Engineer Ali Suliman Ghanem was born in Scientific qualifications power engineering. All these exceptionable notions have been borrowed from the Calvinistic Puritans within the last thirty years, and no more fit Baptists for the work they have to do than Saul's armor suited the stripling David.

But at just that period the great Northwest, where its circulation was expected to be greatest was in such financial embarrassment from repeated failure in her crops that all experienced publishers dissuaded from immediate publication. With what holy joy he now returned to see the valley of dry bones, which he had left so lifeless, quickened to blessed vitality; with what religious fervor he preached, and prayed, and visited from house to house, is recorded in his journals and letters of this period, and is still cherished in the grateful recollections of some who then witnessed his joy and shared his labors.

Staughton called on Brother Welch and myself briefly to explain why we desired to engage in this mission. The quiet home of Asa and Hannah Peck at their lowly dwelling in the parish of Litchfield South Farms, Connecticut, witnessed his birth on the 31st of October, 1789; and there for eighteen years he was reared in the simplicity, frugality, and industry becoming a child of the Puritans. The Foreign Mission Board, at their annual meeting in New York, had discussed but not decided the question of establishing a mission in the Missouri Territory.
