The existing engagement groups within the G20 process represent the obvious starting point for this undertaking. The results should enhance both the legitimacy and effectiveness of G20 discussions, decision-making, and resulting policy implementation. China has been very successful in constructing pipelines in Myanmar and Central Asia.

Overall, astute political leadership is fundamental to creating broad consensus on ecological interdependence in South Asia. Total contributions to multilateral organisations represented around 30% of ODA in recent years, and OECD members account for around 80% of the funding for the multilateral system.

Thailand Can Revive Inclusive Growth, says New World Bank Report

There is also a hierarchy among engagement groups, with the B20 being the best resourced and having the best access to the official level of the G20 Cooper 2013, 194. How do you think this differs from the current practice of diplomacy in the region? In other contexts, they have been instrumental in capacity-building and knowledge transfer Sewall 2017. I suggest a number of policy interventions that can be undertaken to encourage inclusive cooperation between state-level actors, energy companies, and institutions.
