In most of the examples, the relative clause is replaced by a main clause in both German and Norwegian. Eller er det innbilsk av ham a tro at det er dette lit.

Norwegian

Jeg bruker hue, gutten min.

French

In the English material, on the other hand, there appears to be a tendency to conventionalize the present-tense form, probably connected with the common use of the contracted form that's and, in general, with the formulaic character of the construction. MW1 Wenige sterben, ohne ihre Fehler einzusehem darum ist der Tod ja so friedvoll.
