Valentine's Day Designs by Caspari: Celebrate in Style

We, Black women, are that place we can come to restore. If you are greeting a superior or an elder, you must raise it above your shoulders and bow when presenting the Hada; if you are greeting an equal, you raise it and lay it in their hands before they present you with one, too; and if you are receiving one from an elder, you must accept it with both hands and raise it over your head so you can wear it on your shoulders.

Being able to have that figure stand in for us and be loud, proud, strong and very Black is important. Here you will find a wealth of information relating to the personalization of Company Holiday Cards, , and even that is not only informative but fun to read. The adopted Christmas greeting is not too far from its English roots, and it is pronounced about the same way.
